Overview

Eve has a broad practice across all of our practice areas, including private children, family finance and property, international family law and applications under the Family Law Act 1996.

Prior to practising as a barrister Eve worked as Legal officer for the RCN where she successfully defended nurses before disciplinary and regulatory tribunals for issues including lack of competence, misconduct, and issues of fitness to practice. She also worked as a Presenting Officer regularly before fitness to practice tribunals on behalf of the regulator. Eve has continued to undertake regulation work for medical professionals and social workers.

Eve also spent time working with victims of sexual assault and rape at Rape Crisis and St. Mary's Sexual Assault Referral Centre in Manchester, where she gained experience of dealing with a wide range of vulnerable children and adults.

Eve is known by those who instruct her for a practical approach, whilst giving honest advice as to what is realistic and achievable. She is very down to earth and approachable.
